REASONS FOR DECISION

Introduction

1. The Applicant, Lieutenant Colonel Harry Smith SG MC (Retd), seeks review of a decision of the Chief of Army to refuse to recommend Private Allen James May for the Commendation for Gallantry for his service at the Battle of Long Tan on 18 August 1966 in Vietnam. Private May was initially deployed as the forward scout of 4 Section, 11 Platoon, D Company, 6th Battalion the Royal Australian Regiment (6 RAR) during the Battle of Long Tan.

2. Lieutenant Colonel Smith held the rank of Major during the battle, and was the Officer Commanding D Company 6 RAR. He asserts that on 22 August 1966, following earlier discussions, he presented the Battalion Commander, Lieutenant Colonel Colin Townsend (CO 6 RAR), with a number of written recommendations for awards for gallantry during the Battle, including a written recommendation for a Mention in Despatches (MID) for Private May and for reasons that have never been satisfactorily explained, the nomination appears not to have been progressed.

The Battle of Long Tan

3. In 18 August 1966, D Company 6 RAR was engaged in one of Australia's heaviest actions of the Vietnam War, in a rubber plantation near the village of Long Tan. The 108 soldiers of D Company held off a large enemy force for over three hours during a tropical downpour. They were greatly assisted by a timely ammunition resupply by Royal Australian Air Force (RAAF) helicopters, close fire support from artillery, and the arrival of Armoured Personnel Carriers (APCs), together with reinforcements from other elements of the battalion. Seventeen Australians were killed and 25 wounded, with one of the wounded dying several days later. A full description of the Battle, developed by the Tribunal from a range of sources, is provided at Attachment A.

Recognition for D Company 6 RAR

4. On 21 December 1966, the first set of Imperial gallantry awards for Long Tan was announced (further awards were announced later). In 1968, D Company 6 RAR was awarded a United States Presidential Unit Citation (PUC) for its actions at Long Tan. The PUC is the highest unit award in the US Honours and Awards System.

5. The individual awards appeared to some, including Lieutenant Colonel Smith, to be less in number, and of lower standing, than expected. The documents recording the original Imperial award recommendations were filed, and in accordance with standard procedure they were released for public access after 30 years. In 1996, Lieutenant Colonel Smith accessed the records to see what had happened to the award proposals he recalled discussing with his superiors but which had, he thought, been changed or ignored. He discovered that there was no paperwork for some and paperwork for others showed the proposed awards had been downgraded. He and others began to lobby Government to rectify this perceived injustice – to have the honours he originally recommended awarded and to approve a number of South Vietnamese awards they thought had been rejected at the time.

6. Following a number of representations to Government from Lieutenant Colonel Smith, between 2004 and 2009 there were a range of reviews in relation to the recognition for those who served at the Battle. The details of those reviews and the awards given are detailed at Attachment B.

Application for review

7. In 2011, Lieutenant Colonel Smith made submissions to the Tribunal's Inquiry into unresolved recognition for past acts of naval and military gallantry and valour (the Valour Inquiry). In March 2013, these submissions and others were referred by the then Government to the Chief of the Defence Force and the respective Service Chiefs for consideration.

8. In November 2014, the Chief of Army rejected Lieutenant Colonel Smith's submissions. Lieutenant Colonel Smith lodged his application for review of the Chief of Army's decision regarding Private May to the Tribunal on 3 April 2015. Despite any previous considerations, Lieutenant Colonel Smith has a statutory entitlement under the Defence Act 1903 (the Defence Act) to seek review of the Chief of Army's most recent decision in the Tribunal.

Tribunal jurisdiction

9. Pursuant to ss 110VB(1) of the Defence Act 1903 (the Defence Act) the Tribunal has jurisdiction to review a reviewable decision relating to a Defence honour if an application is properly made to the Tribunal. The term reviewable decision is defined in s110V(1) and includes a decision made by a person within the Department of Defence or the Defence Force to refuse to recommend a person for a Defence honour in response to an application.

10. Regulation 93B of Defence Force Regulations 1952 defines a Defence honour as those honours set out in Part 1 of Schedule 3. Included in the Defence honours set out in Part 1 is the Commendation for Gallantry. The Tribunal considered that the Chief of Army's refusal to recommend Private May for the Commendation for Gallantry constitutes a reviewable decision. Therefore, the Tribunal has jurisdiction to review this matter.

11. In accordance with s110VB(1) of the Defence Act, as the matter under review concerns a Defence honour, the Tribunal does not have the power to affirm or set aside the decision but may make recommendations regarding the decision to the Minister.

Conduct of the review

12. In accordance with its Procedural Rules 2011, on 28 May 2015, the Tribunal wrote to the Secretary of the Department of Defence informing him of Lieutenant Colonel Smith's application for review and requesting that he provide a report. On 7 August 2015, Director General Personnel-Army, on behalf of the Secretary, provided the Tribunal with a report. This report and other documents were exchanged with Lieutenant Colonel Smith and additional statements were obtained from various witnesses and sources. Hearings were held in Queensland from 1 to 3 March 2016 when the Tribunal received oral evidence and submissions from Lieutenant Colonel Smith, representatives from the Department of Defence and other witnesses. Further details in relation to the conduct of the review, including a list of witnesses, are provided at Attachment C.

13. A bibliography of the research material gathered by the Tribunal during the course of the review is provided at Attachment D.

Eligibility Criteria for the Commendation for Gallantry

14. The Commonwealth of Australia Gazette (CAG) No S25 dated 4 February 1991, created the awards of the Star of Gallantry; the Medal for Gallantry; and the Commendation for Gallantry by Letters Patent, which provide recognition for members of the Defence Force and certain other persons who perform acts of gallantry in action. The conditions for these awards are referred to as the Gallantry Decorations Regulations 1991 (the Regulations). The Regulations were amended in CAG No. S420, dated 6 November 1996.

15. The Regulations as amended, stipulate the following conditions for award of decorations at Regulation 3:

(1) The Star of Gallantry shall be awarded only for acts of great heroism or conspicuous gallantry in action in circumstances of great peril.

(2) The Medal for Gallantry shall be awarded only for acts of gallantry in action in hazardous circumstances.

(3) The Commendation for Gallantry may be awarded for other acts of gallantry in action which are considered worthy of recognition.<sup>1</sup>

Private May's Service

16. Allen James May was born on 26 March 1945 at Home Hill, Queensland. He enlisted for National Service on 30 June 1965 and, after recruit and initial infantry training, was posted to 6 RAR in September 1965.

17. May arrived in Vietnam with 6 RAR on 8 June 1966 and was a private soldier in 4 Section, 11 Platoon, D Company.<sup>2</sup> His platoon was under the command of Second Lieutenant Gordon Sharp, who was killed in the Battle of Long Tan. Sergeant Bob Buick assumed platoon command after Lieutenant Sharp's death. Private May was 11 Platoon's forward scout.<sup>3</sup>

18. May was wounded by errant artillery fire on 6 February 1967 during Operation TAMBORINE (the same action that resulted in the death of Warrant Officer Jack Kirby). After completing his year-long tour with 6 RAR, May was discharged from the Army on 29 June 1967 after his return to Australia.

19. Private May was one of a number of D Company members to receive a gift (in May's case a doll) from the South Vietnamese Government following the Battle of Long Tan. In 2004 he received the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Silver Star.<sup>4</sup>

Private May's actions

20. Australia's Official History of the Australian Army and the Vietnam War gives the most authoritative and detailed description of the Battle of Long Tan.

21. While Private May is not mentioned by name in that history, he was a member of 11 Platoon that quickly found themselves isolated and in the thickest of the fighting at Long Tan. At approximately 1700 on 18 August 1966, the platoon was receiving fire from an enemy force of around 600 in an elevated position to their north, sustained assaults from a force of unknown size to their east, while enemy had been seen to their south. The enemy were within 50 metres of their position and friendly artillery was falling within 100 metres (see Map).

22. By 1750, the Platoon was able to withdraw from its isolated position, and in doing so left 15 dead or missing behind. It made its way to a consolidated company position from which the surviving members of the company were able to fight off numerous enemy assaults.

Lieutenant Colonel Smith's submissions

23. Lieutenant Colonel Smith submitted to the Tribunal that on 22 August 1966, following earlier discussions, he presented the Battalion Commander, Lieutenant Colonel Colin Townsend, with a number of written recommendations for awards for gallantry at Long Tan, including a written recommendation for a MID for Private May.

24. While Lieutenant Colonel Smith has made detailed submissions about his drafting of this recommendation, and his discussions with Lieutenant Colonel Townsend and other members of his company about this and other recommendations, no record has been found of the written recommendation in respect of Private May.

25. A citation, apparently drafted by Mr Buick in 2009, is included in one of Lieutenant Colonel Smith's submissions to the old Tribunal in 2009. It reads:

1731007 Private Allen James May, a National Serviceman with 11 Platoon, D Company 6th Australian Regiment on 18 August 1966 displayed outstanding duty during the battle in the Long Tan rubber plantation. Although wounded he remained at his post and was instrument (sic) to fighting off the assaulting enemy preventing the platoon being overrun. His actions were an inspiration to others in the unit.<sup>6</sup>

Other accounts

26. Terry Burstall's book The Soldiers Story covers Private May's actions at Long Tan. In an account apparently given by May, he describes his recollection of D Company's first engagement with enemy troops:

Private Allen May was the forward scout of the arrowhead formation of 11 Platoon moving up the right hand track.

When we moved off in this arrowhead formation we travelled a few hundred metres and I saw what I thought was a bunch of kids sitting around a fire having lunch, then I realized these kids had weapons. [Private] Doug Fabian and myself both opened up on these people. We wounded two and they took off through the rubber.<sup>7</sup>

27. It should be noted that Lieutenant Colonel Smith does not agree with the above version of events. Lieutenant Colonel Smith is of the view that the first contact that D Company had with the enemy was with a group of enemy that walked into the right flank of 11 Platoon.

28. In a later excerpt from the same book, May gives an account of the attack on the platoon by a large enemy force:

I was shocked and amazed when I saw the tracer and bullets hitting the ground all around me, and a bloke stepped out from behind a rubber tree and opened up on us with an automatic weapon. I was so amazed that I said to Bluey Moore 'that bloke's trying to kill me' and Bluey said 'Well get the bastard first'. Next time he popped up I let him have it, and hit him with a tracer in the chest, and he stood up screaming like a Banshee and tearing at his chest, and did a backflip and I reckon he died.<sup>8</sup>

29. May is quoted about the platoon battle in Lieutenant Colonel Smith's book Long Tan, The Start of a Lifelong Battle:

The enemy weren't diving for cover from tree to tree, but just continued to walk in like zombies. It was like shooting ducks in a bloody shooting gallery and for every one shot there were two to take his place. I would have killed at least 40 Vietcong myself.<sup>9</sup>

30. In Burstall's book there is another account about Private May and others from Mr John Heslewood, former private soldier of 11 Platoon, where Mr Heslewood recalled:

It was pissing down rain at this stage and there was talk of air support. We heard later that air support couldn't get in, as they couldn't see where to bomb as our smoke wouldn't rise through the trees...About five of us were pinned down behind the rubber trees. I think it was (Private) Brian Halls, Allen May, (Lance Corporal) Barry Magnussen, Dougie Fabian and myself. We were there I don't know how long. It could have been ten minutes, it could have been two hours. There was a lot of firing coming in on us and it was splattering mud all over us where it hit the ground...It got to the stage where we all thought there was no way we could get back out of there. The only help we seemed to get was from the artillery. Every time the enemy troops got close to us it seemed that a salvo of artillery would land amongst the, just in time. We didn't really have to fire much to keep them back, as we didn't have all that much ammunition anyway, and we were using our fire properly and not wasting it.<sup>10</sup>

31. Burstall's book then gives Private May's account of the withdrawal:

The action seemed to go on for hours and I don't know whether Sergeant Buick got a radio call to fall back or what, but I saw him get up and call out in his guttural voice 'Every man for himself'. That was the last I saw him...I know I thought 'Well this is it I'm gone' so I got up and started running back to the west.

I hadn't gone very far when I got a hell of an impact in my back and it knocked me about ten feet on my face through the mud. A bullet had gone through my entrenching tool that I strapped to my pack and knocked me along the ground and winded shit out of me. I slid through the mud, and when I realised I was still all right, I undid my backpack and threw off my webbing and waterbottles. I kept my rifle, because I still had about four rounds. I got up to run again.<sup>11</sup>

32. The same book relates how Private May and Private Fabian later managed to return to company headquarters. It should be noted that there are varying accounts of this part of the action. Importantly, Mr Buick firmly refutes the assertion that he ever said ‘Every man for himself’<sup>12</sup>.

33. Private May’s individual actions are not mentioned in Mr Buick’s book, All Guts and No Glory.<sup>13</sup> However, in oral evidence to the old Tribunal’s Inquiry in 2009, Mr Buick stated:

May, who was forward scout of that particular section, and the other people in the section prevented the VC attacking me from the east, my front. That particular section took the brunt of the battle because 20 minutes after all the bullets started flying they attacked us from the east roundabout 80 to 100 strong. We had no artillery available or what was available was not dropping where we wanted it so therefore I spoke to Harry and I said well Moore for an MM, Eglinton for an MID, Magnussen Lance Corporal for an MID and May for an MID.<sup>14</sup>

34. In his oral evidence to the Tribunal on 1 March 2016, Mr Buick stated that it was the fact that Private May had sustained a wound but carried on in the battle that merited recognition. Buick explained that this action helped sustain the morale of the section while under intense attack.

Allen May was part of that section, he was wounded and remained on duty and it is through his steadfastness after being wounded, a huge crease across the top of his head, he remained steadfast, never came back for medical treatment. I don’t think he realised he had been shot. I’m sure what Allen May did boosted the resilience of other members of the section.<sup>15</sup>

35. Lieutenant Colonel Smith could add no further comment about May’s actions stating that his view had been developed after conversations with the company leadership.

The Defence submission

36. In reviewing Lieutenant Colonel Smith’s submissions to the Valour Inquiry, Army applied the guidelines adopted by the Tribunal in the course of that Inquiry. Army undertook a process review of each case to determine whether due process had been followed according to the rules at the time, that there was no evidence of maladministration and that there was no new or compelling evidence provided.

37. In its written submission to the Tribunal, Army stated that it determined that further investigation and research into any of the 13 cases under review by the Tribunal ‘was not warranted as Lieutenant Colonel Smith’s submissions did not present any authoritative evidence of maladministration or failure in due process.’ Its written submission further stated that ‘there were no grounds for further review as there was no new or compelling evidence provided by Lieutenant Colonel Smith to warrant reconsideration of the original decisions.<sup>16</sup>

38. Representatives from Army reiterated this position at hearing.

Tribunal Consideration – The Merits Review

39. The Defence position on this application, that, in the absence of maladministration or compelling new evidence, there should be no consideration of retrospective awards for gallantry or distinguished service, is a firm policy position. The Tribunal could give no weight to the position of Defence. While this policy was endorsed by Government in 2013,<sup>17</sup> it has never been supported by an enactment. In an undertaking a review of a reviewable decision under Section 110VB of the Defence Act, the Tribunal is bound to undertake a merits review against the eligibility criteria for the honour sought. Those criteria do not reflect the policy position of Defence, and there is no impediment in those criteria to a retrospective award. While the applicant has made a number of claims regarding maladministration in the processing of award recommendations arising out of the battle of Long Tan, the Tribunal has focused on the merits of the claim for the honour sought and has determined that it is not necessary to establish maladministration as a pre-requisite to such a merits review, which includes taking into account new evidence.

40. Notwithstanding obvious discrepancies in the accounts of May and others about the start of the battle, it is clear to the Tribunal that Private May had a forward role in 11 Platoon in its initial contact with the enemy forces, the pursuit of those soldiers into the plantation, and the subsequent contact with a large enemy force. He remained in the battle through to 11 Platoon's withdrawal back to company headquarters where he was treated for his wounds. He took a rear position when D Company defied several further attacks.<sup>18</sup>

41. While the Tribunal was presented with different views as to the actions of Private May, it appears certain that May was wounded and carried on his duties resolutely in the defence of his platoon position. This action did seem to boost the morale of fellow soldiers in a very difficult position, but the Tribunal finds that such actions do not meet the standard of the then MID or the contemporary Commendation for Gallantry. Without verified accounts of his actions as forward scout or his assistance with wounded soldiers in the withdrawal back to the company position the Tribunal finds that a recommendation for an honour cannot be made in relation to Private May.

42. The Unit Citation for Gallantry, awarded to D Company 6 RAR in 2010, is awarded to recognise extraordinary gallantry in action by a unit. The Tribunal

<sup>17</sup> This 'policy' would appear to have been taken from the Defence Honours and Awards Appeals Tribunal's Report of the Inquiry into unresolved recognition for past acts of naval and military gallantry and valour. While Government accepted the Tribunal's recommendations contained within that report, there was not a recommendation which specifically dealt with undertaking a process review first and then only proceeding to a merits review if there was new or compelling evidence or evidence of maladministration.

considers that the acts of individual and collective gallantry by Private May and others that resulted in the survival of 11 Platoon and the ultimate victory of D Company are appropriately recognised by this rare award.

TRIBUNAL DECISION

43. The Tribunal decide to recommend to the Minister that the decision of the Chief of Army to refuse to recommend Private Allen James May for the Commendation for Gallantry be affirmed.

Description of the Battle of Long Tan

The following description of the Battle of Long Tan has been developed by the Defence Honours and Awards Appeals Tribunal from a range of sources, including the official history, operation and artillery logs and the Tribunal's own research. A bibliography is provided at Attachment D. The purpose of this attachment is to provide a general background of the battle and to give context to the actions of the 13 individuals under review by the Tribunal.

1. On 18 August 1966, Delta Company (D Company), 6th Battalion, the Royal Australian Regiment (6 RAR) was engaged in one of Australia's heaviest actions of the Vietnam War. The soldiers of D Company, with a New Zealand Artillery Forward Observer team (FO) attached in direct support, held off a large enemy force, which appeared determined to annihilate them. The battle lasted for over three hours in a rubber plantation near the village of Long Tan. Much of the battle occurred during a tropical downpour. The battle site was approximately five kilometres east of the 1st Australian Task Force (1ATF) base but within range of artillery firing from that base.

2. D Company was greatly assisted in its defence by heavy concentrations of close artillery fire provided by two Australian and one New Zealand field batteries as well as a United States medium battery in the 1ATF Base. Excellent Australian communications also enabled an ammunition resupply by Royal Australian Air Force (RAAF) helicopters, arriving not long before the final Viet Cong (VC) assault on the company. The arrival of a troop of Armoured Personnel Carriers (APCs), together with infantry reinforcements from other elements of the battalion, just on dusk, was the final step in causing the enemy to break off the engagement. However it was D Company that bore the brunt of the battle.

3. D Company was one of four rifle companies of 6 RAR. Together with 5 RAR, New Zealand elements and supporting artillery, engineers, signals, intelligence and logistic units, they made up 1ATF. The 1ATF had deployed to a newly established base near Nui Dat, in the centre of Phouc Tuy Province, South Vietnam in June 1966. Their mission was to take control of security in the Province. The Australians based their plans on their lengthy experience in counter revolutionary warfare gained in Malaya and Borneo. Phouc Tuy Province had previously been the responsibility of the Army of the Republic of Vietnam (ARVN). The ARVN units had been forced back to the major towns, leaving the VC largely in control of the smaller villages and much of the surrounding countryside.

4. In the lead up to the Long Tan battle in August 1966, the Task Force had busied itself preparing the base defences and patrolling; establishing control over the area in the immediate surrounds of the base. There were a number of contacts with the enemy, however, prior to 18 August 1966, all contacts were of small scale and the enemy was identified as either local force VC, who were lightly armed, often with old or obsolete weapons, or elements of the D445 Provincial Battalion. Neither force was uniformed, nor did they have indirect fire weapons.

5. During the early hours of 18 August, the 1ATF base was mortared and shelled by indirect mortar, artillery and recoilless rifle fire, resulting in 22 casualties. The probable enemy firing points were identified by compass bearings taken from locations within the base and these positions immediately engaged by artillery counter battery fire. The VC firing positions were to the east of the 1ATF Base and on the western edge of a rubber plantation.

6. Soon after first light, B Company, 6 RAR, was sent to search for these firing positions. B Company found evidence of the positions, together with signs of casualties presumably resulting from the counter battery fire, and identified tracks heading east away from the firing positions. D Company was then deployed on foot from the base to relieve B Company and ordered to follow up this track. D Company deployed, just as they had done in previous patrols, with only 60 rounds of ammunition per rifleman in their ammunition pouches and 600 rounds per machine gun. They took sufficient rations for a three day patrol.

7. Over the previous weeks, signals and other intelligence had identified the probable deployment of a main force VC Regiment to the east of the base, but patrolling had not been able to locate any tangible signs of its presence. In order to protect the source of this intelligence, 1ATF Commander, Brigadier Jackson, had not warned 6 RAR of this possibility, however he had directed that no patrol was to proceed beyond the range of artillery deployed within the base. The use of indirect fire by the enemy in the early hours of 18 August should have confirmed this intelligence and provided a warning of the potential presence of a better armed and trained force that was superior to the D445 Battalion.

8. After a handover from B Company, D Company entered the rubber plantation and advanced to the east following the track used by the withdrawing enemy. The plantation was relatively open, providing good observation and fields of fire between the rows of trees.

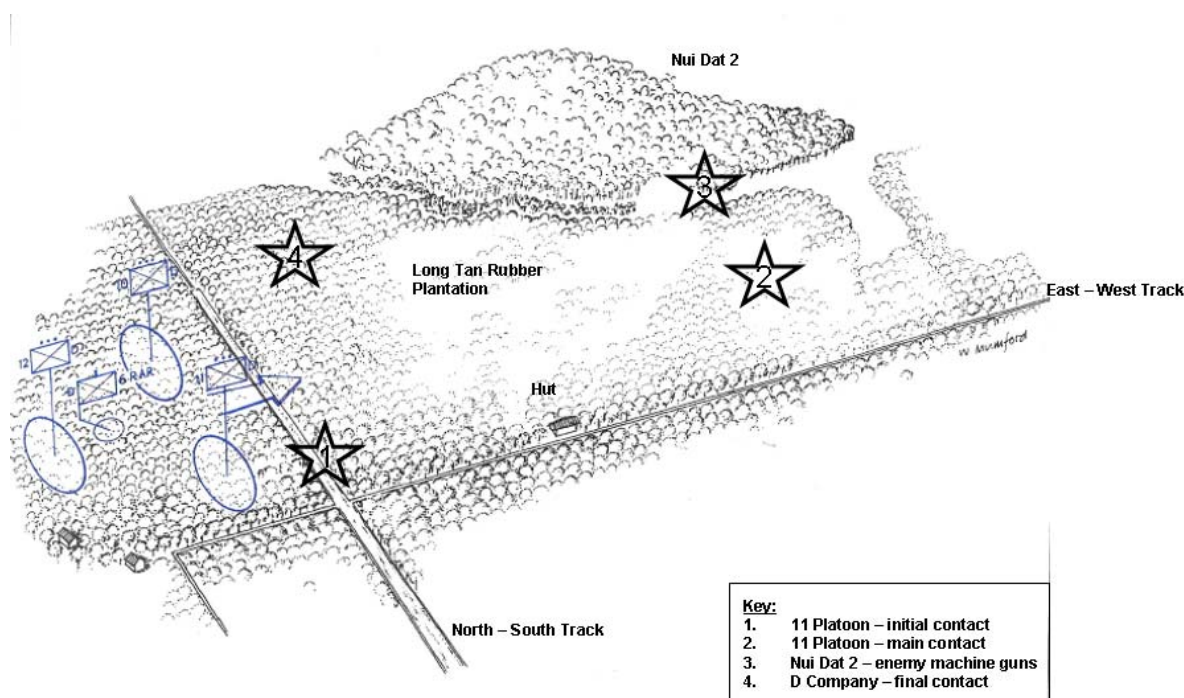

9. D Company was comprised of three rifle platoons (each of approximately 30 soldiers) commanded by a company headquarters element (CHQ). CHQ contained the command group, signallers, a medical orderly and the attached FO party. CHQ was protected by an infantry support section. Each rifle platoon carried three belt-fed machine guns (GPMG M60), and the support section held one, making a total of ten machine guns in the company.

10. Soon after entering the rubber plantation it was observed that the track split and Major Smith, the Officer Commanding D Company, changed his patrolling formation to 'two up'. That is, the company advanced into the rubber plantation with two platoons abreast, 10 Platoon on the left and 11 Platoon on the right, followed by CHQ and the reserve platoon (12 Platoon), see Map (below). The company frontage was estimated to be around 400 metres.

11. At 1540 hours, 11 Platoon (on the right) were in the process of crossing the north-south track that traversed the rubber plantation, when they encountered a small enemy patrol of six or seven uniformed soldiers moving north along the track. 11 Platoon engaged the enemy, wounding one VC. The enemy fled east, carrying their wounded comrade. They did not return fire but dropped an AK47 assault rifle in their hasty retreat. This weapon and the identification of enemy in uniforms should have alerted D Company to the presence of regular main force VC troops, rather than the irregular VC previously encountered.

12. Following this brief encounter, the commander of 11 Platoon, Second Lieutenant Sharp, received approval from Major Smith to quickly follow up the enemy who had fled. Second Lieutenant Sharp changed the formation of 11 Platoon to 'extended line' in order to provide the maximum possible frontage towards the expected enemy. His three sections were deployed across a frontage of approximately 300 metres, with 6 Section on the left, 4 Section and Platoon Headquarters in the centre and 5 Section on the right. Each section was approximately 9 soldiers strong. After a fast 250 metres advance they passed a hut (found to be unoccupied) and then, at 1608 hours, having advancing a further 250 metres, they were engaged from their left flank by small arms and machine gun fire. This heavy fire was from a distance of approximately 150 metres (see Map) from the higher ground on the forward slopes of the Nui Dat 2 feature.

13. This sudden burst of accurate fire devastated 6 Section, catching it from a flank, whilst they were upright and moving, causing significant casualties. Only two members of 6 Section (one of whom was badly wounded and unable to be evacuated) ultimately survived the battle. Second Lieutenant Sharp reacted by calling for immediate artillery support and by deploying the uncommitted 5 Section to move across his front to bring fire onto the enemy. Shortly afterwards the enemy sent forward an attack wave from the east forcing 5 Section to fall back and go to ground; and for the remnants of 11 Platoon to form an all-round defensive position. This initial enemy frontal attack wave was beaten back by accurate and well-controlled fire of 11 Platoon, using their semi-automatic rifles and machine guns. At around this time rain began to fall, and soon after became monsoonal.

14. At approximately 1650 hours, Second Lieutenant Sharp was killed whilst exposing himself in an attempt to determine the fall of shot of the artillery fire that was now assisting the defence. His platoon sergeant, Sergeant Buick, then took command of 11 Platoon. He organised the defences, controlled the artillery fire support, communicated with Major Smith and eventually directed a withdrawal.

15. After taking heavy casualties in frontal attacks from the east, the enemy appeared to have realised that they could not defeat 11 Platoon with attacks from that direction and commenced a number of attempts to outflank them. However, 11 Platoon was so determined in their defence that their defensive position was never penetrated, despite themselves taking very heavy casualties. Even after the withdrawal, the enemy never ventured into the position that had been occupied by 11 Platoon, as two wounded soldiers, unable to be rescued during the withdrawal, remained untouched until the relief the next morning.

16. Meanwhile, as a result of enemy mortar fire directed near the initial 11 Platoon contact location on the north-south track, CHQ and 12 Platoon moved northwest some 300 metres and set up a temporary defensive position. The probable mortar firing position was engaged with counter battery fire from the US medium battery. 10 Platoon was, by this time, further east but still some 2-300 metres northwest of the 11 Platoon contact location. Major Smith directed Lieutenant Kendall, the commander of 10 Platoon, to move his platoon in an attempt to support 11 Platoon, now in heavy contact.

17. As they advanced towards the sounds of the contact, 10 Platoon fortuitously observed and then engaged a large enemy force that were then attempting to outflank and assault 11 Platoon from the north. Ten Platoon were able to break up this assault wave, inflicting heavy casualties upon the enemy. Ten Platoon now themselves came under heavy fire, and took a number of casualties. They were unable to link with 11 Platoon. Major Smith then recalled 10 Platoon to re-join CHQ in the rear defensive position.

18. Realising that his company was under severe threat from an unexpectedly aggressive, determined and well-armed enemy, Major Smith requested air support, a resupply of ammunition and reinforcements using his radio communications.

19. The airstrike was initially called at 1702 hours and the aircraft appeared overhead in location at 1715 hours. For aircraft safety the artillery fire, falling in support of 11 Platoon, was halted to allow for this planned airstrike. By this time the rain was very heavy and the airstrike had to be abandoned as the aircraft were unable to see the coloured smoke thrown by 11 Platoon in order to identify the target location. The aircraft subsequently dropped their bomb-load further east of the contact site.

20. Major Smith then directed Lieutenant Sabben to take two sections of his uncommitted 12 Platoon to attempt to relieve 11 Platoon using a more southerly route than that previously taken by 10 Platoon. At 1730 hours, 12 Platoon reported that they were still 400 metres from 11 Platoon and they were coming under fire both from the north and south as well as receiving 'overs' from fire directed at 11 Platoon from the east. Artillery fire was then recommenced with the field regiment having its fire directed to the south of 12 Platoon.

21. At 1800 hours, the helicopter ammunition resupply arrived at CHQ and the ammunition distributed to 10 Platoon who had fought heavily during their attempted advance to 11 Platoon. The artillery fire was again halted for air safety. It was at this moment that Sgt Buick made the decision that, as 11 Platoon was now almost completely out of ammunition, that the only solution for the survival of the remainder of his platoon was to attempt a clean break and to make a withdrawal. Of significance was that no member of D Company had been able to reach 11 Platoon for the two hours that the battle had been raging.

22. The order to withdraw was passed by word of mouth and the surviving soldiers rushed to their rear in small scattered groups. They were initially unaware that the 12 Platoon patrol was just a few hundred metres to their rear. Lieutenant Sabben had by this time realised that he could not reach 11 Platoon, and noting that smoke had been thrown for the ammunition resupply, decided to throw smoke himself in the hope 11 Platoon would see it. Some, including Sergeant Buick moved to the smoke they could see at 12 Platoon. Some, from the right section, moved directly to the smoke observed further back at CHQ, where the helicopter resupply was occurring.

23. At approximately 1815 hours, 12 Platoon, with the remnants of 11 Platoon, consolidated with the remainder of the company. Temporarily a short lull descended on D Company as contact with the enemy was broken. This enabled the reorganisation of the company defensive locality and the distribution of ammunition, under the direction of the Company Sergeant Major, Warrant Officer Kirby. The returning wounded from 11 and 12 Platoons were moved to the company aid post, under the care of the company medical orderly.

24. At 1820 hours, Major Smith reported on the battalion radio net that the 'enemy could be reorganising to attack'. At the same time, B Company elements, who had been directed to join and reinforce D Company by foot, reported that they were now 500 metres southwest of D Company.

25. Back at the 1 ATF base, at approximately 1800 hours, Brigadier Jackson, in response to the earlier request for reinforcements, authorised a relief force comprising A Company, 6 RAR mounted in the APCs of 3 Troop, 1 APC Squadron, to proceed to relieve D Company. The force had a difficult passage to reach D Company, needing to 'swim' a flooded stream and to advance though terrain that could afford concealment to an enemy who may well have been planning to ambush them. To reach D Company as rapidly as possible, Lieutenant Roberts, the commander of 3 APC Troop, had split his force, one element to proceed as quickly as possible to relieve D Company and the other to await the collection of the Commanding Officer of 6RAR, Lieutenant Colonel Townsend (CO 6 RAR) to facilitate his passage to the battle location.

26. At 1830 hours, the main group of 3 APC Troop, carrying A Company, entered the rubber plantation from the south, approximately 1500 metres from D Company. Lieutenant Roberts deployed his APC in extended line astride the north-south track, for the advance north to D Company. At 1835 hours, this force struck a significant enemy group crossing their path from the east. Initially fearing that it could be friendly forces, and fearful that heavy 50 calibre machine gun fire would be directed towards D Company, the troop halted. At this moment an infantry Sergeant recognised the enemy and promptly initiated contact with his rifle. The enemy were then scattered by the combined fire of APCs and infantry weapons. This enemy group were later identified as elements of the Regional Force Unit, D445.

27. At 1840 hours, after the advance was resumed, 3 APC Troop met another enemy force, this time moving west to east. Forewarned from the earlier contact the enemy utilised an anti-tank weapon which fortunately missed its target. However an APC commander was mortally wounded before the enemy was again scattered and the advance resumed. The APC carrying the wounded APC commander returned to the 1ATF Base.

28. Shortly afterwards, the APC Troop was joined by the other APC element carrying the CO 6 RAR, who had arrived without incident. The APC troop quickly covered the remaining distance to D Company without further contact with the enemy.

29. At the D Company location, the enemy had moved quickly and aggressively to undertake what was later described by Lieutenant Kendall as 'human wave' assaults. These assaults from the east, starting at approximately 1830 hours, fell mainly upon 10 Platoon, which had been sited on that part of the company perimeter. The enemy attack was supported by machine guns firing from the Nui Dat 2 feature. D Company exacted a heavy toll on the enemy, as they advanced in relatively open terrain. D Company had the advantage of being low to the ground and with their machine guns well sited and the fire closely coordinated. Additionally, the artillery fire from the regiment of three field batteries, which commenced at 1834 hours, was able to be brought in very close to the D Company defensive locality. This was achieved as the direction of fire was almost overhead and the splinter pattern of the numerous shell bursts went forward from the point of detonation.

30. From 1840 hours, the New Zealand field battery was lifted from falling just to the east of D Company, with the remainder of the regiment, and directed onto the slopes of Nui Dat 2. This action was described in the artillery radio log as being an attempt to silence the flanking fire from enemy machine guns. The United States medium battery was directed at a possible mortar location further to the south east of D Company. The rate of fire from the eighteen 105mm field howitzers at this period (from 1834 until 1855 hours) was probably the most intense rate ever fired by artillery in support of Australian forces during the Vietnam War, with 1,350 rounds being fired at the VC positions in just this twenty minute period.

31. As the APCs swept in from the south, the artillery fire was halted and the enemy were observed rushing away to the east. They had broken off their already faltering attack and, as darkness fell, no further sign of the enemy was seen. The combined force was deployed in all-round defence and reorganised by Lieutenant Colonel Townsend. Later that night the casualties were evacuated. Of major concern was that the roll-call taken by 11 Platoon had disclosed that 16 men were missing in action. The next morning a battlefield sweep was conducted and two wounded soldiers from 11 Platoon were recovered along with the bodies of 14 men who had died in that forward location.

32. At or near Long Tan on 18 August 1966, a total of 17 Australians had been killed and 24 wounded, with one of the wounded dying several days later. Earlier, during the indirect fire attack on the 1ATF Base, a further 22 Australians had been wounded.

33. Later investigations indicated that the enemy engaged was the regular, well trained and equipped 274 VC Regiment, supported by the local D445 Battalion. Casualties to the Vietnamese forces were very high, with estimates, based on both body count and captured documents, being well in excess of 150 killed in action, perhaps many more, as the enemy made every possible effort to recover their dead and wounded.

34. There has been much conjecture as to the intent of the 274 VC Regiment on 18 August 1966, when it approached the newly established 1ATF Base. Was it intending to test out the Australians? Was it intending to attack the 1ATF Base; or was it attempting to lure an Australian force out of the base and destroy it in an ambush?

35. Certainly one outcome was that the enemy never again conducted large scale operations within artillery range of the 1 ATF Base. No Australian base in Phuoc Tuy Province was ever subjected to an enemy ground assault intended to overrun it. However, Fire Support Bases (FSB) deployed outside Phuoc Tuy Province, such as FSB Coral, FSB Balmoral and FSB Anderson were assaulted. It may be that one of the reasons for this was that the enemy units in these later cases were not as aware of the potency of 1ATF defensive techniques as were the enemy operating within Phouc Tuy Province after 16 August 1966.

36. The 1ATF also learned many tactical lessons - not the least of which was the realisation that they were now in a 'real war' against a well-armed, brave and determined enemy.

Previous reviews and awards resulting from those reviews

1. In 2004, in response to representations from Lieutenant Colonel Smith, the then Minister Assisting the Minister for Defence and Minister for Veterans' Affairs, the Hon. Mal Brough MP, recommended to the Governor-General that 22 individual South Vietnamese decorations that were to be presented on 2 September 1966 should be approved for wearing. Although the requirement for a formal government-to-government offer could not be fulfilled, as the South Vietnamese government fell in 1975, the Governor-General agreed that there was sufficient evidence of an intention to offer the awards (for example the presentation of cigar boxes and dolls). However Mr Brough decided that the same process could not be applied to the claim for the Vietnamese Unit Citation.<sup>1</sup>

2. In October 2007, the then Government appointed an independent panel to review the treatment of award recommendations stemming from the Battle of Long Tan, as well as service recognition for Royal Australian Air Force (RAAF) personnel posted to Royal Thai Air Force Base Ubon between 1965 and 1968.

3. With respect to Long Tan, the panel, chaired by retired Major General Peter Abigail AO, was directed to have regard to the Imperial gallantry awards recommended at the time of the battle as well as claims for the award of the Republic of Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm Unit Citation (RVCGWPU). In 2008, the then Government made the following decisions<sup>2</sup> on receipt of the report:

- award the Star of Gallantry to Lieutenant Colonel Smith;
- award the Medal for Gallantry to Mr Sabben and Mr Kendall, platoon commanders;
- approve the RVCGWPU for wear by the strength of D Coy 6 RAR in Vietnam on 18 August 1966; and
- refer any unresolved concerns regarding the battle to the new, administratively established Defence Honours and Awards Tribunal (the old Tribunal).

4. Briefly, the Abigail Panel considered that the claims in respect of Smith, Sabben and Kendall were the subject of 'recommendations initiated by an authorised commander so that a particular award might have resulted'.<sup>3</sup>

5. As noted above, following the Government's consideration of the Abigail report, the old Tribunal was directed to inquire into and report on unresolved concerns regarding individual awards for the Battle of Long Tan. In particular, the old Tribunal was to consider claims concerning Australian Defence Force personnel who were recommended for recognition following the Battle of Long Tan. In submissions to this Inquiry, Lieutenant Colonel Smith sought recognition for 12 individuals who fought at the Battle of Long Tan.

6. The old Tribunal considered its task was ‘to determine whether concerns regarding claims for medallic recognition of those who took part in the Battle can be supported’.<sup>4</sup> As such, the Tribunal did not consider it necessary for it to direct its attention to a merits based assessment of the actions of individuals who were involved in the battle. Rather it was ‘concerned with the processes that were followed in regard to the making of awards to those involved.’<sup>5</sup>

7. On this basis, the old Tribunal concluded that it was unable to recommend any new or upgraded award to any individual member of D Company, 6 RAR unless there was documentary or other compelling evidence that a proper recommendation was initiated at the time. Its examination of the available evidence did not enable it to conclude that any such recommendations were made in respect of the persons whose actions were brought to the old Tribunal’s attention, except for an RAAF helicopter pilot, Flight Lieutenant Cliff Dohle. Dohle was the only individual recommended for an award by the old Tribunal, though it did recommend that D Company 6 RAR receive a Unit Citation for Gallantry for its performance at the Battle of Long Tan. These recommendations were subsequently accepted by Government.

Details of the conduct of the review

1. In 2011, Lieutenant Colonel Smith made submissions to the Tribunal's Inquiry into unresolved recognition for past acts of naval and military gallantry and valour (the Valour Inquiry). These were among 174 submissions seeking recognition for 140 individuals and groups not specifically named in the Terms of Reference for that Inquiry. As set out in the Terms of Reference for that Inquiry, the Tribunal was 'to report to the Parliamentary Secretary for Defence on the detail of the additional submissions received in order for the Government to determine whether a proposal for recognition should be referred to the Tribunal for review.'<sup>1</sup>
2. Two of Lieutenant Colonel Smith's submissions sought a Victoria Cross for the late Warrant Officer Class Two Jack Kirby and another was a resubmission of his 2009 submission to the old Tribunal's inquiry, following agreement from the former Chair that it would be included as a submission to the Valour Inquiry.
3. In February 2013, the then Chair of the Tribunal conveyed to the previous Government copies of all additional submissions for recognition together with the Tribunal's preliminary assessment of the appropriateness of the supporting documents, so that the Government could confirm what submissions should be received by the Tribunal for further consideration.
4. In March 2013, Government chose to refer the majority of the submissions (including Lieutenant Colonel Smith's) to the Chief of the Defence Force and the respective Service Chiefs for consideration.
5. In November 2014, the Chief of Army rejected Lieutenant Colonel Smith's submissions. In doing so, he relied on the findings of the old Tribunal's Inquiry and that Lieutenant Colonel Smith's submissions with respect to Kirby and the names listed in his 2009 submission contained no new compelling evidence or evidence of maladministration.
6. This advice was relayed to Lieutenant Colonel Smith by the then Parliamentary Secretary for Defence, the Hon. Darren Chester MP, on 22 December 2014. After further correspondence with the Parliamentary Secretary, Lieutenant Colonel Smith lodged his application for review in the Tribunal on 3 April 2015, and provided further material on 6, 8 and 10 April to be included in his application. That application sought review of the decisions of the Chief of Army with respect to 13 individuals who fought at the Battle of Long Tan.
7. In accordance with its Procedural Rules 2011, on 28 May 2015, the Tribunal wrote to the Secretary of the Department of Defence informing him of Lieutenant Colonel Smith's application for review and requesting that he provide a report. On 7 August 2015, Director General Personnel-Army, on behalf of the Secretary, provided the Tribunal with a report.

8. On 12 August 2015 this material was provided to Lieutenant Colonel Smith for comment. Lieutenant Colonel Smith's comments were received on 17 August 2015. Lieutenant Colonel Smith provided further written material to the Tribunal on 20 May, 6 July, 19, 20 and 25 August and 12 November 2015. Further material was provided on 5, 7, 19 and 28 January, 19 and 22 February, during hearings between 1 and 3 March, and on 7 March 2016.

9. On 16 November 2015, the Tribunal wrote to Lieutenant Colonel Smith advising him of tentative dates for hearings and inviting him to provide a list of witnesses to appear before the Tribunal at those hearings. Lieutenant Colonel Smith provided his list of witnesses on 5 January 2016.

10. On 18 January 2016, the Tribunal provided Lieutenant Colonel Smith with a package of the submissions and research material it intended to rely on as part of the review. Lieutenant Colonel Smith provided written comment on this material on 20 and 26 January 2016. Further research material was provided on 25 February 2016, and Lieutenant Colonel Smith provided comment on this material on the same day.

11. The Tribunal met on 10 December 2015, 17, 18, 19 and 29 February, 11 March, 13 May and 14 June 2016 when it considered the material provided by Lieutenant Colonel Smith, the Department of Defence and research material provided by the Tribunal's Secretariat.

12. The Tribunal conducted hearings on 1, 2 and 3 March 2016 when it heard oral evidence and submissions from Lieutenant Colonel Smith, representatives from the Department of Defence and other witnesses. Names of all those heard by the Tribunal include:

14. On 17 June 2016, further evidence was obtained by way of a telephone discussion with Mr Geoffrey Kendall MG to follow up on some elements of his submission of 3 March 2016 and the citations which he had provided to Lieutenant Colonel Smith in 2008. A record of this discussion was sent to Lieutenant Colonel Smith on 17 June 2016. Lieutenant Colonel Smith provided his comments on 20 June 2016.
