Part 3 – Desired outcome

Provide a summary of your submission:

A Review into classification of service of Rifle Company Butterworth to warlike service, 4100654 Pte Peter John Strods, service at Rifle Company Butterworth, 1st September 1987 to 4th December 1987 2 section, 4 platoon, B Company, 1st Battalion Royal Australian Regiment. The only time ever in my service with the Australian Army where we carried live ammunition including a MAG 58 general purpose machine gun, loaded and on standby with 1000rd of ammunition in the guard hut. We also had rules of engagement and we had to fill out a last will and testament (As we did when we deployed on Operation Morris Dance in May of the same year, the first operational deployment of Australia forces since Vietnam) whilst carrying out guard duty and I also remember on our first day in country being taught in Bassa Malay language the words " Stop or I will shoot" and to this day I can still remember those words, I can't write them down as I'm unsure of the spelling but can still say the command fluently. We were also told on our first day at Butterworth we were in a active war zone that Airbase Butterworth was a legitimate target for the Communists insurgents and to be under no illusion that we were the enemy in the view of the communists insurgents and thus we were also legitimate targets as well. During my service I cannot recall a time that we every carried live ammunition whilst performing guard duties in Australia let alone having rules of engagement. If required I can send a photo of the plaque that my platoon had made there of our tour of duty and the ASM SE Asia I was awarded for that tour.
